

Professor John Fraser

John is a rural general practitioner and public health physician with extensive clinical, research and teaching experience in remote and rural Australia. John's research interests include rural health, public health, medical education and workforce research. John has published widely in Australia and internationally writing over 50 papers. John holds the positions of Head, School of Rural Medicine, University of New England, Director, Hunter New England Rural Training Unit, Hunter New England Health Service and is Adviser to the Centre of Expertise on Hospital and Health Services Management, Naresuan University, Thailand.